FORMER SLEUTH ON THE STAND

Daugherty Named In Connection With Film Deal.

BURNS ALSO CITED BY WITNESS

Latter Swears That One of the Promoters of the Plan to Exhibit Fight Films Declared That Daugherty and Burns Were Both Involved in the Alleged Conspiracy—Hughes Denies Having Discussed Films.

Washington, March 18.—At the hearing conducted by the senate committee investigating Attorney General Daugherty, a former agent of the department of justice testified that Jap Muma of New York identified Mr. Daugherty as the man behind the plan to exhibit Dempsey-Carpentier fight films in more than a score of states.

G. O. Holdridge was the witness. Muma, it was said, was one of the promoters of the plan.

Mr. Holdridge swore that Muma told him Daugherty and W. J. Burns, head of the department's secret service, were both involved. "He accused the attorney general with being the head of the conspiracy and Burns with aiding and abetting it," Holdridge testified.

The witness also brought in the name of E. B. McLean, and related a story Muma told him of the occasion on which the fight pictures were given a private showing at McLean's house in Washington. Muma said, according to Holdridge, that at that time, in the presence of "cabinet members, diplomats and congressmen," there was a general discussion of the law against shipping fight films in interstate commerce, and it was agreed the law was aimed primarily at pictures of the Jeffries-Johnson fight.

Muma was warned, Holdridge said, by McLean, that he was "headed straight for Atlanta penitentiary" because of the exhibition of the fight pictures, and McLean took the matter up with Daugherty, according to the witness. Daugherty, Holdridge said, took it up with Burns, who said, according to Holdridge: "If you are trying to protect Richard, you are wasting your time, because I am going to put him in Atlanta penitentiary."

No Report Made.

Holdridge said he never reported the result of his investigation of the fight film "conspiracy," "because I had never heard of a precedent where an agent would have to tell his chief, the attorney general of the United States, Burns or anybody else that they were crooks."

"Do you think they are?" Senator Ashurst asked Holdridge. "I certainly do," he responded instantly.

Holdridge charged that Agent Navarro of the department of justice was sent out of the country after he personally had dug up evidence of the alleged conspiracy.

"Were you ever discharged from the justice department?" Wheeler asked. "Yes, in March, 1922. Burns took me back, though, after I told him what was what on a conspiracy charge."

"When was that?" "On May 7, 1922. Burns reinstated me from the day and hour that I telephoned him that I had something important to tell him affecting himself and the attorney general."

Holdridge resigned from the department voluntarily on Oct. 7, 1922, and has not been connected with it since. Holdridge said he received a check later in the summer of 1922 for $400. The check was mailed to him in Cleveland by W. J. Burns.

"What was this check for?" Wheeler asked. "It was for salary, but $280 of it was for the period that they had laid me off."

Wheeler then turned the witness over to Paul Howland, attorney for Daugherty, for cross-examination.

"Why did you have a photograph made of that $400 check?" Howland asked. "I was suspicious about everything in this case," he said.

When Holdridge took the stand Senator Wheeler read a letter which notified department of justice agents that "there was an apparent conspiracy" to show the pictures in various states.

"Keep a careful lookout for any violations and attempt to ascertain evidence that may be used to prosecute a conspiracy charge," the letter, dated Nov. 16, 1921, stated. "The department is looking for this evidence so that further showing of the films may be stopped." The letter was signed by William J. Burns, chief of the bureau of investigation.

PRINCESS CANTACUZENE

Daughter of Frederick Grant
Active in Russian Relief Work.

Secretary Hughes, mentioned by two witnesses before the Daugherty committee as having witnessed the showing of the Dempsey-Carpentier fight films at the home of E. B. McLean, issued a formal statement to say that he had had "no discussion or reference" regarding the films with any one.

Archbishops in Rome.

Rome, March 18.—American Archbishop Hayes and Mundelein, who are to be elevated to the cardinalate, arrived here with suites.

SUITS DISMISSED

Vessel Owners Sought Compensation
For Wartime Seizures.

Washington, March 18.—Suits brought by shipping companies to recover approximately $300,000,000 as compensation for the wartime seizure by the United States of German, Austrian and neutral owned freight and passenger vessels were dismissed by the court of claims. Among the claims was one of the North German Lloyd company to recover about $95,000,000 for its vessels, including the liner Kronprinzessin Cecilie, interned in American harbors and taken over on the declaration of war. The principal question before the court was whether the German and Austrian companies and citizens should be allowed to prosecute their actions before it, the plaintiff contending that the vessels as private property should be paid for under the rules of international law. The court held that the contention could not be maintained.

SCHOOL CHILDREN EMPLOYED IN MOVIES?

State Health Department Orders
an Investigation.

Columbus, March 18.—Dr. N. C. Dysert, chief of the bureau of statistical hygiene, state department of health, has been sent to Cincinnati to investigate charges that a film production company engages the services of children under 18 years of age in the filming of scenarios. Information that the film company was using school children in production work was first given the department by T. P. Kearns, chief of the division of building and factory inspection, after he had made a preliminary investigation. He found the case was outside the jurisdiction of his department and turned the evidence over to the health department for prosecution or further investigation. The film company, it is alleged, has been using children of all ages, many of them from schools of dramatic art. They work about two hours daily and all day Saturday, it is charged.

Limits Trade Board's Powers.

Washington, March 18.—The federal trade commission has no authority, the supreme court held, to the unlimited inspection of the books, papers and correspondence of corporations engaged in interstate commerce. Congress had no intent, the court said, to confer upon the commission visitatorial powers to inspect without limitation the records and correspondence of corporations doing an interstate business.

SENATORS FAVOR CASH BONUS

New Measure to Be Sprung If House Passes Green Bill.

LATTER UP FOR VOTE TODAY

New Farm Relief Measure Introduced
In Senate Would Authorize Chartering of Interstate Farm Marketing Association—Redrafted—Immigration Bill Launched in the House Bars Aliens.

Washington, March 18.—Events in congress this week will determine whether the world war veterans will get a cash bonus or whether he will have to be content with a life insurance policy, paid to his beneficiaries after death.

The house will vote this afternoon on the measure prepared by the ways and means committee which provides for paid-up life insurance for all except those whose service entitles them to $50 or less in cash.

Many members of congress are in favor of a cash bonus. In the last few days, under their guidance, a movement has gained strength to kill the bill and force the ways and means committee to report out a bill incorporating the cash plan as an option.

Those who desire this end will be aided by a portion of the special rule which requires that a two-thirds majority will be necessary to pass the present measure. Advocates of a cash bonus have conferred recently with senate leaders favoring a cash bonus, and have received assurance that a cash measure will be introduced there, if the insurance bill goes through the house.

A new farm relief measure proposed in a bill by Senator Curtis (Rep., Kan.) would authorize the chartering of an interstate farm marketing association for the purpose of processing, preparation of markets, handling, pooling, storing and marketing of agricultural products through co-operation. A loan of $10,000,000 would be made from the government to the association which would work through subsidiary organizations reaching down to community and county co-operatives.

A new immigration bill, redrafted to meet in part the objection raised by Japan and Secretary of State Hughes, was introduced in the house. The new bill retains the basic admission quota of two per cent of the 1890 census and protects the treaty rights of all nations in that no restrictions are placed on those desiring to come to the United States for business, commerce, trade and pleasure. It retains, however, that feature prohibiting entrance for permanent residence of aliens (Japanese, Chinese and Hindus) not eligible for citizenship.

TO HEAD THIRD TICKET

LaFollette, Friends Say, Will Enter
Presidential Campaign.

Washington, March 18.—It is stated here that Robert M. LaFollette has reached the definite decision to head a third ticket in the forthcoming presidential campaign and to make a fight against the old guard organizations of both old parties. His friends are inclined to the belief, however, that he will run as an independent Republican rather than as the head of a third party. He has never bolted the party in which he grew up and it is doubted if he will stage an outright bolt now. He will welcome support from any quarter, as did William J. Bryan in 1896, when the latter accepted the presidential nomination of the Populist party after being named to head the Democratic ticket. It is doubted if LaFollette will take a stand until after the Cleveland convention has adjourned and until after the Democrats have named their ticket.

It is the confident expectation of the LaFollette group of politicians that President Coolidge will be nominated on the first ballot. They are convinced, however, that the Democrats also will nominate a conservative.

Cubans Clash With Marines.

Havana, March 18.—Clashes have occurred between American marines on shore leave at Santiago and Cuban civilians and police, it is reported here. It was stated that some of the marines had been rounded up and taken on board their vessels.

An explosion followed a fire in a cartridge-filling factory at Erith, England. Twelve employees were killed.

CHARLES B. WARREN

DOINGS IN OHIO

Milk Distributors to Meet.

Youngstown, O., March 18.—Milk distributors of eight counties will meet here March 19 to discuss trade conditions and form a district organization of the Ohio Dairy Products association with a view to raising the standard of dairy products and improving sanitary conditions in dairies. The counties to be represented are Ashtabula, Trumbull, Mahoning, Columbiana, Carroll, Jefferson, Harrison and Belmont.

Prisoners to Be Deported.

Columbus, March 18.—Warden Thomas of the penitentiary announced that four prisoners serving terms in the prison will be released to federal authorities for deportation, the board of pardons and parole having directed such release. The prisoners in question are: Abel Quibo, South American; Adam Wroblewski, Pole; Theodore Vlabos, Greek, and Paul Messner, German.

Prisoner Attacks Sheriff.

Ashland, O., March 18.—Ed Hawkins, held to the grand jury on a charge of auto theft, attacked Sheriff Charles Barr when he unlocked the door of his cell, and succeeded in making his escape. Hawkins knocked down Mrs. Barr, who attempted to hold him. He was recaptured later.

Six Meet Violent Deaths.

Cleveland, March 18.—Six persons are dead as the result of a series of shootings, cuttings and accidents here. The victims: Joseph Daxberger, aged 49; Mrs. Joseph Daxberger, 38; Mrs. Lillian Smith, 23; Mrs. Anna Young, 40, negro; Luke Somers, 42, and Marchinski, 38.

Boys Poisoned.

Cambridge, O., March 18.—Jerry Merling is dead and five companions are in a serious condition here as a result of eating wild parsnips. The boys found the parsnips while going fishing. They dared each other to partake of the poison vegetable, it is reported.

Women Killed at Crossing.

Dolphos, O., March 18.—Mrs. John Lehmkuhle, 39, of Dolphos, and Miss Clara Middlekamp, 24, of Ottoville, were instantly killed when an auto, driven by the former, was struck by a train here.

Farmer Kills Self.

Marysville, O., March 18.—John Fish, 50, wealthy farmer, living near Ostrander, committed suicide by hanging. His health was the cause. He is survived by a widow, a son and a daughter.

Theater Safe Cracked.

Lorain, O., March 18.—Yeggs cracked the safe of the State theater here, escaping with cash amounting to approximately $2,500.

Wanted Dummy Fined.

Indianapolis, March 18.—United States District Attorney Homer Elliott admitted after being told of the testimony before the senate committee investigating the department of justice, that an attempt had been made to gain his indulgence toward the exhibition of motion pictures of the Dempsey-Carpentier fight. Mr. Elliott said a man claiming to own the rights to the fight film had visited his office and endeavored to arrange that a "dummy" should be fined but not sentenced to jail for the planned violation of the federal law.

Governor McCray on Trial.

Indianapolis, March 18.—Governor Warren T. McCray went on trial here, charged in an indictment with "embezzlement and larceny" of $155,000 of the funds of the state board of agriculture. Soon after this trial is completed McCray will go on trial in federal court on a charge of using the mails to defraud.

OIL INQUIRY NEARING END

Committee May Conclude Investigation This Week.

WOOD CHARGES TO BE AIRED

Alleged Stock Speculation of Attorney General Daugherty and Senator David Elkins of West Virginia Taken Up—Work Accomplished by the Committee After Five Months' Investigation.

Washington, March 18.—The senate committee investigating the naval oil reserve leases resumed its hearing after a short recess.

Half a dozen witnesses have been subpoenaed for tomorrow to tell what they know of the charges made by Leonard Wood, Jr., that an attempt was made to bargain for votes with the secretaryship of interior as the bribe at the last Republican national convention. When this is cleaned up, with several minor matters, the investigators will be ready to write their report to the senate.

Alleged stock speculations of Attorney General Daugherty and Senator David Elkins of West Virginia were taken up today.

The committee after a five-months' investigation accomplished the following: Institution of court action to cancel the leases and promise of criminal proceedings against at least three of the principals; resignation of Secretary Denby, who signed the leases, and investigation of the official acts of Attorney General Daugherty, now under way by a separate senate committee; testimony showing that A. B. Fall, who leased the reserves, got big loans from E. L. Doheny and later from Harry F. Sinclair.

Testimony was introduced showing that Daugherty and Senator David Elkins participated in Sinclair oil stock speculations; that half a dozen persons through alleged claims to Teapot Dome obtained $2,000,000 from Sinclair so they would not take the matter to court; that Edward B. McLean and half a dozen of his confidential agents pulled political wires to keep him from the witness stand.

Assistant Secretary of the Navy Roosevelt's former connection with the Sinclair oil company was aired again in the house. Congressman Rogers (Rep., Mass.) read from Mr. Roosevelt's testimony before the senate Teapot Dome investigating committee to prove the sale by Mrs. Theodore Roosevelt of her stock holdings had taken place before the lease by Secretary Fall of Teapot Dome to Sinclair. "It was unfair for Congressman Stevenson to have made the assertion that the sale of this stock had taken place after the lease was signed," said Mr. Rogers. "It was an unjustifiable implication."

Mr. Stevenson said he had quoted the record and was justified in his interpretation, but he had accepted the statement by Congressman Longworth as to the date of sale of stock by Mrs. Roosevelt.

TO PREVENT RATE BOOSTS

State Control of Natural Gas Sought
by City Councilman.

Columbus, March 18.—Henry W. Worley, chairman of the council utilities committee, announced he would seek an opinion from City Attorney Leach as to whether or not producing gas companies can be placed under the direct control of the state public utilities commission. If Leach finds that they can be legally controlled, Worley plans to ask council to petition the governor and the commission to place the Ohio Fuel Gas company under its direct jurisdiction in order to prevent, if possible, that company's rate boosting activities. Worley declared that the supreme court of Pennsylvania recently decided that producing gas companies could be controlled by the state, even although they obtained part of their gas outside of the state. If a similar step can be taken in Ohio practically every city in the state that uses gas will benefit, Worley declared.

Doheny Leases Attacked.

Los Angeles, March 18.—Government action asking an injunction to restrain E. L. Doheny from taking oil from section 1 of the Elk Hills naval reserve was filed in court here by Allee Pomerene and Owen Roberts, special attorneys named to wage the fight to cancel the oil leases. The action also asked the appointment of receivers and a decree declaring null and void the leases of December, 1923, granted by the government to Doheny's Pan-American Oil company.

HUGHES REJECTS OFFER

International Agency Suggested by French Government.

Washington, March 18.—The suggestion of the French government for the creation of an international agency to deal with questions arising out of relief credits extended to European countries during and just after the world war was rejected by the American government. In his note to Ambassador Jusserand Secretary of State Hughes says:

"While this government was happy to co-operate with the other interested governments with a view to providing the necessary credits for the purchase of the relief supplies which were so urgently needed in order to facilitate the prompt and practical solution of the pressing relief problems arising in Europe after the conclusion of the war, it has never been the opinion of the government of the United States that it would be necessary to establish any international agency for the settlement of questions arising out of its advances to foreign governments for the purpose of relief or for other purposes, as this government has believed and still believes that any questions that may arise in this regard are susceptible of adjustment through existing channels."

BESSARABIA INVOLVED

Russia Files Protest Against French
Parliament's Action.

Paris, March 18.—The French foreign office has received from Foreign Minister Tchitcherine of Russia a note protesting against the action of the French parliament in ratifying the treaty allotting Bessarabia to Rumania. The soviet minister terms the action "rank interference in Russian affairs." The soviet government had announced that it would not recognize the Rumanian claim to Bessarabia. For months the soviet army has been on one side of the Dniester river and the Rumanians on the other, awaiting eventualities. The treaty in question, signed by Great Britain, Italy, France and Japan, allotted Bessarabia to Rumania as part of the after-the-war territorial settlement.

The soviet government also served an ultimatum upon China demanding that the Chinese accept the Russo-China recognition agreement within two days.

Condemned Man Escapes.

Atlanta, Ga., March 18.—J. B. Satterfield, sentenced to hang for the murder of his brother-in-law, escaped from the "death row" in Fulton tower. Small saws, smuggled into the cell, were used to cut the bars. His cell was on the first floor of the jail. The condemned man was arrested last August in Los Angeles, where he fled after the murder bare two years ago. Satterfield killed his brother-in-law, B. H. Hart, Dec. 27, 1921.

Misuse of Mails Alleged.

Cleveland, March 18.—Eugene W. Duffy, 58, was arrested here, charged with sending obscene letters through the mails. Miss Grace Parks, society girl, is the complainant.

Increase Food Value of Potatoes by Spray

Has Effect of Controlling Diseases and Helps Yield.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Spraying potatoes with such copper sprays as bordeaux, pickering sprays, and barium water sprays not only has the effect of controlling the diseases for which they are applied, but, according to the United States Department of Agriculture, thorough and timely spraying usually greatly increases the yield, influences the composition of the tubers, and increases their keeping qualities.

For many years observers have reported also a stimulating effect of bordeaux mixture on potato foliage and a gain in yield even when no diseases were present. The why and how of this effect of copper have been much discussed by scientists and many experiments made. An interesting contribution to this subject has lately been made by F. C. Cook of the bureau of chemistry in department bulletin 1143, where evidence is presented to show that bordeaux and other copper sprays increase the starch and nitrogen constituents of the potato tubers and consequently make them more valuable for food and industrial uses.

The bulletin contains considerable data collected from a number of stations doing experimental work with copper sprays on potatoes and should be of interest to the plant physiologists and others doing investigational work of this nature. Results obtained in seven states (Virginia, Maine, Minnesota, Pennsylvania, New York, Connecticut and New Jersey), showed an average of 2,591 pounds of solids of the tubers per acre for the non-copper sprayed plants and 3,490 for the copper-sprayed plants, an average increase of 32.4 per cent, or 48 bushels, due apparently to the use of copper sprays. The results should furnish additional support to the practice of spraying potatoes.

Those interested may secure a copy of this bulletin free of charge upon request from the United States Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C.

Value of Pure Bred Is Taught by County Agent

A county agent in Colorado reported to the United States Department of Agriculture a convincing method he has used in furthering the better-sires work in his county. A butchering and meat-cutting demonstration was given with two market hogs, one a pure-bred Duroc Jersey and the other a scrub red hog. The hogs were weighed, then slaughtered and dressed, and weighed again. The live weight of each hog was practically the same. The dressing percentage of the pure bred was about 7 per cent more than that of the scrub. The good hog figured to be worth $2.10 more than the other. This was but a fraction of the difference in value between the two hogs, however, as the pure bred was but half as old as the scrub hog, and had consumed much less feed.

The meat-cutting demonstration was held in the auditorium of the county school, and more than 500 men and women were present. The two carcasses were cut into the various cuts of meat, showing the superior quality of the meat of the pure-bred hog.

Alfalfa in Full Bloom

Will Produce More Hay

Alfalfa cut in full bloom is slightly less palatable but produces more hay than when cut at beginning of bloom. Fields mowed earlier die out sooner. Cutting the alfalfa just when the new growth starts from the crown gives the plants the best chance of competing against weeds and conserves moisture by keeping the ground shaded most of the time. Too late fall cutting promotes winter killing. Nebraska station finds that it does not pay to plant alfalfa in rows and cultivate for hay.

Combination to Provide

Pasture for Farm Stock

A combination that will provide a good pasture for sheep, calves and colts all summer may be secured by using rape as a base. The mixture consists of three pounds of rape, one bushel of oats, one-half bushel of one or two other small grains, and from ten to twenty pounds of sorghum. If desired ten pounds of Sudan grass may be substituted for the sorghum with satisfactory results.

Durability of Leather

Can Be Much Increased

Specialists in the bureau of chemistry, United States Department of Agriculture, have learned that the durability of machine belts, driving belts, harness, and other leather articles used by the farmer can be greatly increased after a judicious selection in the first place by giving them the care that will strengthen and preserve them.

Rat Viruses Unreliable

and Also Quite Costly

"Generally unreliable and costly," the United States Department of Agriculture says of rat viruses. The department has vigorously urged the destruction of rats and co-operated with local rat-killing campaigns. Farmers' Bulletins 896 and 932, issued by the department, describe methods of destroying rats.

White and Colors in Dainty Frocks

Used in Combination for Gowns, Sweaters, Coats, Hats and Accessories.

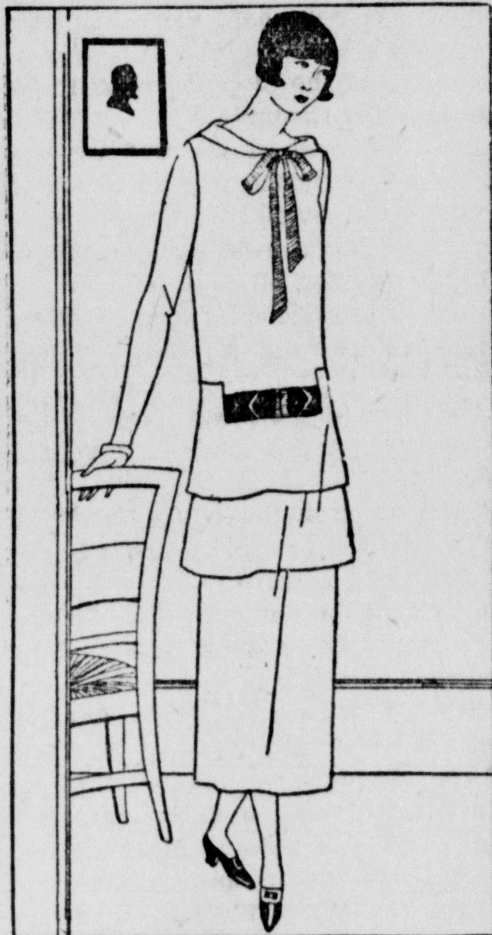

White is apparently a foundation for the newest styles, notes a fashion correspondent in the New York Times, for it is not only worked out in every type of dress—gowns, sports suits, sweaters, coats, hats and accessories—but it is also combined with colors in the most effective, often the most striking manner.

Nothing more charming, more swaggy, more flattering and more generally satisfactory is seen than the all-white flannels, crepes, silks and knitted frocks and suits. But there are exceedingly smart combinations and contrasts, of which black-and-white is the most popular. White voile or crepe gowns are covered with a cut-out design in black cloth or felt, stitched on flat. In others the colors are reversed, and stunning things in coats, sweaters, even stockings, shoes and gloves, are shown in sharp black and white, or white on black.

This is as good for the misses' as for the more mature styles, but bright, lovely combinations are used in the younger models; jade and white, orange and white, and much scarlet with white. That green jade, in many tones, is all the rage is the last word from Paris, and is already indicated in the leading houses of New York.

A beautiful, very young model in jade green chiffon is embellished from the decollete neck to the hem with a pattern in darker green leaves of silk applique and joined with traceries of fine crystal beads, the edge of the skirt trimmed with a narrow band of white fur. With this artistic gown of sylph-like lines is a cape of jade green chiffon, gathered into a band at the neck, which is concealed by a full ruff of the chiffon. The cape is finished at the bottom with two tucks and a wide hem.

The one-piece tiered, draped or tunic model is well received, but the one-piece chemise dress is obviously the choice of the younger set. It is beltless and made in an unbroken line from throat to instep, the tendency being toward a shorter skirt line.

One shown in an exclusive shop is made of pale green chiffon, high decollete, sleeveless, and is cut absolutely straight and narrow. This is worn over two paler shades, one of taffeta, the other of chiffon, and a knot and long ends of ribbon in a slightly deeper shade of green are attached over the hip at one side. Nothing could be more daringly severe, nor appeal more definitely to one of slender, youthful figure.

In simpler gowns, the whole effect is in the fabric, fine crepe or chiffon, and in the grace with which the drapery is arranged. Lace in a finishing collar about the neck, deep cape-collar or bertha, is seen on some of the new modes, and is charming. Organdy is coming into its own, and some girlish frocks in pale green, rose and yellow organdy, made with rather full skirts, wide hem and tucks, with a lace or muslin frill finishing the round neck and sash of ribbon, are among the sweetest things for girls shown by a shop that specializes in clothes for young people.

New Cotton Fabrics for Little Misses' Frocks

To mothers who take pride and pleasure in fashioning adorable frocks for the tiny daughter the new cotton fabrics suggest innumerable possibilities. There are smart little plain and checked ginghams guaranteed not to fade so that they are excellent for practical play dresses. English prints have a charming quaintness that makes them especially suitable for children's clothes, while the latest version of dress sateen shows a wide crinkly stripe and scattered motifs of gay flowers in a formal arrangement.

For little afternoon dresses one may choose embroidered grass cloth that has small conventional designs formed by dots embroidered in color. The range of embroidered cottons is exceptionally wide this spring and the loveliest show formal motifs in the brightest colors at widely spaced intervals.

Gypsy Woman the Boss.
The wife and mother is the real boss of the gypsy family. She controls the property, manages the children and holds the strings of the family pocket-book. They think the men are not wise and discreet enough to deal with such weighty matters. When the suffrage agitation was at its height in the country the gypsies marveled that American women were fighting for rights which their women had been exercising from the days of remotest antiquity. The "gypsy queen" is a familiar character in the gypsy camps of Europe, but in this country a man is usually in apparent command of the company. But those who have penetrated into the inner circles of their camps tell us that the women are the real leaders.—Kansas City Star.

Source of Modern Drama.

The morality play was first produced in England in the Fifteenth century, and growing out of church pageants, gave rise to modern drama. In the morality plays the characters personified abstract ideas, such as virtue, vice, wealth, power, knowledge, jealousy, ignorance, etc. The productions were meant to teach a needed reform, and quite often were dull, says the Detroit News. The vices, better understood by humanity than the virtues, played many tricky pranks and furnished the humorous element. The clowns and fools, superbly created by Shakespeare, were a development of the vices of the morality play.

What Are Ferrets Used For?

In some places they are used for hunting rabbits. The ferrets, either muzzled or unmuzzled, go into the burrows or underground runs of a rabbit warren and cause the rabbits to scurry out into the open where they may be more easily captured. However, the use of ferrets in hunting is prohibited in many of the states and is discountenanced by most conservative sportsmen, except where rabbits have become so plentiful as to be pests. Ferrets are now used mainly for starting rats from their underground homes or from the bottom of grain stacks, where rats do great damage.

A Call

A millionaire attired in old overalls was touching up the paint here and there in his kitchen. The servants were all out. So when the doorbell rang, he answered it himself. Two fashionable ladies asked if his wife was at home and were politely informed that she was not. As they descended the steps he overheard one saying: "Huh, they pretend to be rich, and yet the butler has to do the painting around the house."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

POWER PLANT

Million Dollars Will be Added to Tax Duplicate in Harrison Township.

At a meeting of the county commissioners Monday a franchise was granted to the Columbus Railway Power & Light company to construct an overhead crossing on the Columbus pike south of the Big Walnut creek. A temporary crossing will be put in and later the overhead will be built. The company has purchased 500 acres of land, a portion of the Barcus farm, and will construct a power plant along the river. It is said that the company's plant will add a million dollars to the county's tax duplicate.

The company will lay its own railroad track to the power plant from Lockbourne to haul building material and coal.

Tibetan Gold Miner
Can Take Only Dust

From time immemorial gold has been one of the principal exports from Tibet, being exchanged for silver and other products of the surrounding countries. The principal gold fields are found in the Changtang, or North Desert, and also in the territory east of Lhasa, between that city and the Chinese frontier.

The Tibetan gold miner, however, only collects gold dust, believing that should he remove any nuggets the supply of gold dust will cease, as the nuggets are supposed to be alive and to produce the nuggets by breeding.

An instance of the lengths to which superstitious belief is carried in Tibet is furnished by the following occurrence:

The Tibetan government a few years ago sent a youth to England for training as a mining engineer and metallurgist, and on his return instructed him to search for gold.

In a very short time he discovered gold in exceptionally large quantities and proceeded to extract it from the ore in which it was embodied. Large numbers of nuggets were also found.

Just as the work was getting into full swing the local lamas arrived on the scene and forbade further operations and directed that all gold already taken out should be put back.

The young engineer appealed to the Tibetan government to sanction his carrying on the work, as the find was of great value and would give very considerable revenue.

The lamas retorted that unless their instructions were carried out to the letter ill fortune would surely come to the country, and especially to the state religion.

In the face of this attitude of the priests the government was powerless and in consequence one of the richest gold fields in Tibet, and, for all that is known to the contrary, in Asia, must lie undisturbed for an indefinite period.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

Acts as Phone Receiver

An incandescent lamp can be made to act as a telephone receiver, and to accomplish this there is needed a metallic filament such as an Osram lamp of 100-candle power. It is connected on a 120-volt direct current circuit with the use of a self-induction coil. In shunt on the lamp is a condenser, and also the secondary winding of a telephone transformer. On the primary end of the transformer is a five-cell storage battery and a microphone transmitter. Words spoken into the transmitter are reproduced by the lamp, thus giving a most novel effect. To explain this we may suppose that the telephone currents are added upon the direct current so as to give waves which cause the lamp to burn more or less brightly, according to the strength of the waves. This causes small changes of heat in the lamp that act on the glass and the air, so that a sound is heard. Thick glass stops the action, and it is best to use a 500 to 1,000-candle power lamp with thin glass, as this is most sensitive, and gives the best sounds.

How Sandstones Differ

Decomposed rock can be solidified again either by applying great pressure or by injecting cement, or by doing both. Thus sands are formed into sandstones, clays become shales and calcareous deposits yield limestone. Aside from their cementing materials, sandstones differ in composition exactly as did the sands of which they are composed. Sandstone, according to the United States geological survey, may be nearly pure quartz, or quartz and feldspar, or quartz, feldspar and mica, and it may vary in texture from the fine to the coarse. Some sandstone is so coarse that it will hold six quarts of water to the cubic foot, and underground deposits of such sandstone form excellent reservoirs, which may yield a never-failing supply of water.

Otaheite Apple

The Otaheite apple has an unusual feature, the best specimens being extremely palatable and delightful, while the smaller and inferior specimens are highly resinous and distasteful. The fruit is the product of a stately tree of Polynesian origin, that has been planted in various places in Florida.

The apple is of orange color, shaped like an egg and two or three inches long, the skin having at all times under pressure an odor of turpentine, but the yellow part of the fruit is pleasantly aromatic and bears a resemblance to the pineapple.—Nature Magazine.

Speaking of a Horse

A man drove into an old-fashioned hotel yard and, addressing the hostler, said:

"Extradite my quadruped from the vehicle and give him an adequate supply of nutritious aliment, and when the aurora of morn shall illuminate the horizon I will award you a pecuniary compensation for your amiable and obliging hospitality."

The groom thought for a moment, then rushed into the hotel and said: "Hi, Bill! There's a foreigner wants to speak to you."—Pearson's Weekly.

The Chase

We met up with Diana and made an appropriate bow.

"So you are Diana, goddess of the chase?"

"I have turned that job over to Pegasus now," said the fair one. "I am now patron of the chase, that is, I say, ram hunts."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

COLUMBUS AND
CIRCLEVILLELocal Men Were Dinner Guests of Capital City Business Men.

Good Music, Recitations, Speeches and Eats Combined to Make a Most Delightful Meeting. Banquet Served by Ladies Enjoyed by 250.

The Manufacturers and Jobbers association of the Columbus chamber of commerce arrived in this city at 3:30 o'clock Monday afternoon over the Scioto Valley Traction line with fifty-one members in the party.

The visitors spent some time calling on their friends before the time of the banquet given at six o'clock at the Methodist church. The members of the association met in the auditorium of the church and shook hands with a number of business men who welcomed the visitors to the city.

Avery Clinger, secretary and manager of the Manufacturers and Jobbers association, announced that no two members of the Columbus chamber of commerce should sit together. This was done so every visitor could be entertained by a business man of this city.

Two hundred and fifty covers were laid for the banquet in the social rooms of the church and their guests. The supper was served by the Ladies' Aid society. To say that the supper was appreciated was only mildly putting it, as the strangers were pleased and expressed their hearty appreciation of the appetizing meal.

President Frank E. Barnhill, of the local chamber, presided and The High School orchestra under the leadership of Professor C. F. Zaenglein played a number of selections and were roundly encored. The tables were decorated in green and white with green candles illuminating the center in honor of Ireland's patron saint. The waitresses wore hats of white, trimmed in green shamrocks. These were presented by the Clark-Davis Millinery company, of Columbus.

The big treat of the evening was the program, which was replete with good music, songs, speeches and readings. It was a most pleasing affair. The dinner was all that could be desired, the service was most excellent and the visitors were loud in their praise of the culinary art displayed.

Rev. Floyd E. Logee, pastor of the First Presbyterian church, gave the invocation.

"The Going of the White Swan" by Gilbert Parker, recited by Miss Lucile D. Reynolds, teacher of elocution and public speaking, at the high school was most pleasing and she made a profound hit with the visitors.

John D. Hummel made a fine address of welcome to which H. M. Clark of the wholesale millinery firm of Clark-Davis, made a happy response. Mr. Clark is president of the Manufacturers & Jobbers association.

Professor W. C. Weidler, of the department of marketing and commerce of the O. S. U., gave one of the best talks on merchandising that has ever been given here. His talk was illuminating and entertaining. He told how to display merchandise to get the best results, he sold the audience. It is evident that he understands the art of real salesmanship.

Tom Constable, of the firm of Seifert & Constable, sang "The Old Road," "The Lazy Song" and "The Little Irish Girl." He was accompanied by Miss Alys Seitz, of this city.

Miss Marguerite Barnhill made a hit, singing two songs entitled "The Slave Song," by Teresa Delriego, and "The Lilac Tree."

Tom Davis, of the Felber Biscuit company, couldn't find his music so he had to go it alone without an accompaniment. He sang with much fervor "The Little Irish Colleen," "The Naming of Old Ireland," and "Memories."

In concluding the evening's program M. E. Jones, president of the Columbus chamber of commerce, spoke of cooperation. He thanked Miss Barnhill, Miss Seitz, Miss Reynolds and the High School orchestra, the ladies of the church, who served the supper and the members of the local chamber of commerce for their splendid welcome.

He said he was glad to meet such people and hoped that we may become better acquainted. Columbus is made up of just your sort of people. People from small towns come to larger towns for a wider field for their energies and without this ambition they would not make good in Columbus or elsewhere.

We think these trips are beneficial to both. If I mistake not, they do you as much good as it does us, anyway. Cooperation will build up both towns. We welcome you to Columbus YOUR capital city.

SOCIAL CALENDAR

The annual musical and social session of the Monday club was held this week at the home of one of its members, Mrs. Hulse Hays, with sixty members in attendance. The musical committee composed of Mrs. B. R. Bales, Mrs. B. K. Clapp, Mrs. Hulse Hays, Mrs. John Dunlap, Miss Charlotte Phelps, had charge of a very entertaining program. The social committee composed of the associate members with Mrs. F. L. Fickardt, as chairman, assisted in the entertainment and served the tempting lunch.

In honor of St. Patrick's day, green was the color scheme used in the decorations.

The program was composed of the following numbers:

"My Irish Lassie"....Jas. M. Combs
"Dream of an Hour"—Left hand only Anna Schleyer
"There's a Lark in My Heart"—Barney O'Flynn....Mrs. Frank Bennett
"Mother Macree"—Duna
..... Mrs. John Dunlap
"The Little Red Lark"—Kerry Dance Mrs. Clark Hunsicker
Hindu Slumber Song—"Top of the Mornin'" Helen Marion
Tune from County Derry; Juba Dance —N. Dett Abbe Mills Clarke
Miss Clarke was the accompanist for the solos. A musical contest followed and Miss Dorothy McArthur responded with the greatest number of correct answers.

On unlucky March 13, one of the most enjoyable events of the season was held at the home of Mary E. Cookson, of Washington township. Miss Cookson handsomely entertained to a birthday dinner. The table was beautifully decorated in lavender and white hyacinths. It being the anniversaries of Edna M. Dunkle and Miss Cookson and they received several nice presents. Covers were laid for Mrs. Edna M. Dunkle, Mrs. Minnie Frazier, Mrs. Mollie Stout, Mrs. Bertha Compton, Mrs. Eva Huffer, Mrs. Mary L. Burkhardt, Mrs. Ida E. Stout, Miss Rosa Heise and Miss Agnes Frazier.

Miss Bernice Shasteen had a farewell party for her little friend, Miss Dorothy Kuhn, last Friday evening. The evening was pleasantly enjoyed by the little ones by bobbing apples and playing games. A delicious lunch was served late in the evening. Those present were Dorothy Kuhn, Margaret and Ruth Long, Thelma Wilkins, Cleo and Kathryn Brown and Bernice Shasteen.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred McGath entertained Monday evening at their home, 335 East Mound street to a birthday surprise party in honor of the twenty-third birthday anniversary of their daughter, Mrs. John Bartels. The guests occupied three tables and played progressive euchre. A lunch was served.

In Memoriam.

Editor Union-Herald:—Martha, wife of Elijah Sheeders, passed into the great beyond at her home in Harrisburg, Franklin county, Ohio, Wednesday, March 11, 1924. She had been confined to her bed since January 29, and was prepared to meet her Savior. She was the second daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Wilson Price and was born in Scioto township, Pickaway county, May 24, 1878, and at her demise was 45 years, nine months and 18 days old. Her mother died when she was only two years old and her father's parents reared her to womanhood. She is the last member of her father's family, as her only sister died some four years ago.

Mrs. Sheeders had spent practically all her life in and around Harrisburg and was married August 19, 1896. To this union were born two sons, Robert J. and Donald F., who with her husband, one granddaughter, four cousins, Mrs. Bessie Durrett, Denny and Jesse Cross, of Columbus, and Nellie Bittin-grove of Hamilton, Ohio, are the only surviving relatives and with her many friends she will be sadly missed for her kindness and hospitality, as she was ever ready to help others.

She was a member of the United Brethren church, K. P. Sisters and the Ku Klux Klan, of Franklin county. The Burtner Sisters and K. K. K. assisted by her late pastor, Rev. Burtner had charge of her funeral services, which were held at her late residence Saturday, March 15, at 10:30 a. m., after which she was laid to rest in Pleasant cemetery near Mt. Sterling. Fifty members of the K. K. K., of Columbus, attended the funeral in a body and six ladies acted as pallbearers.

Cow Had Novel Ride.
Motorists of Williamsport, Pa., waiting at a railroad crossing for a train to pass, found out the reason why the pilot of a locomotive is called a cowcatcher. On that part of the engine a middle-aged cow sat, taking in the view, if not enjoying the ride. When the motorists signaled the engineer the train stopped and the cow was assisted from her perch, none the worse for her experience. Where and how she was picked up, the train men did not know.

Average Length of Human Life.
The average duration of human life is about thirty-three years. Statistics show that one-fourth of the people of the earth die before the age of six years, one-half before they reach their sixteenth birthday, and only one person of each hundred born lives to be sixty-five.

AMUSEMENTS

The James Cruze Paramount picture of the stage success, "To the Ladies," which opened a three days' run at the Met theater last evening is the most delightfully human picture we have ever had the pleasure of seeing. It is radically different from anything heretofore attempted.

The unromantic locale of "To the Ladies" is the Kincaid Piano Factory. The theme of the story is in keeping with the title and has been acclaimed by critics everywhere as an unexaggerated slice of life. It tells of a young wife's interest in her husband's business affairs and her struggle to obtain his promotion to the position of manager of the Kincaid plant. The scene of the salesman's banquet in the production is one of the most humorous ever shown on the screen as in the episode in the Beebe home, when men come to remove their piano in front of the Kincaids for nonpayment of interest due on a loan since invested in a fake farm proposition.

Edward Horton is a riot in the role of Leonard Beebe, while Theodore Roberts runs him a mighty close race for individual acting honors. Misses Eddy and Dresser also give superb characterizations. On the whole we enjoyed "To the Ladies" to the limit.

"LASSES" WHITE'S ALL STAR MINSTRELS.

The "Lasses" White All Star minstrels now on its fourth successful tour comes to the Grand on Friday, March 21, as one of its principal features this season, second only in importance to "The Blackville Speedway." "Lasses" has written a distinct departure from the usual minstrel offering in a sketch called "At the Seaside." Scenically much is promised as the locale of the sketch is a seaside resort a few miles from Blackville where the beaux and belles of the vicinity assemble for an outing. The occasion is one of singing and dancing and in the interpretation of its various characters the full strength of the company is enlisted. Aside from its other merits it should prove a treat from the singing and dancing standpoint. Associated importantly with "Lasses" this season are Dan Holt, "Zip" Lee, "Bobby" Burns, "Nate" Talbot, "Jack" Hays, Maxwell Gordon, George Milner and "Billy" Doss, a monologist who is one of the new members.

IN CENSUS WORK FOR 44 YEARS

Chief of Bureau Worked Up From Ranks.

When you want him to talk about himself and he wants to talk about his work what are you going to do?

Usually, you are going to talk about his job.

That is why what set out to be a story of the life of William Mott Steuart, director of the census, developed into a discussion of the census, says Herbert Corey in the Chicago Daily News. One gathered from Mr. Steuart that it is a pretty satisfactory affair. If any one has been skipped he doesn't know it. Now and then some one barges into the census office and complains that he and his wife and their son in college did not get into the rolls. If he is insistent enough Mr. Steuart can take him out into a non-fireproof vault, which has a delectable odor of old paper and faded ink, and take down a bound volume and turn to the right place and find the names. He may not find the wife's age. I discover that the census is apt to be somewhat less than complete in this, especially between the ages of thirty and forty-five. But the names are there—110,000,000 of them.

Of course he could not completely evade the gentlemanly agent. That gives the wrong impression. He did not try to evade. He merely seemed not to be interested. Observation told me that he is tall, as broad shouldered as an office man ought to be, has two kindly blue eyes with black pupils and an excellent bald spot. He is an ardent auto camper in the summertime, between spells of garden making, and in the winter runs a heavy bird-feeding business on both sides of his house. Birds are as much the victims of caste as are Brahmins. The cardinal feeds early in the morning and late at night, so that he will not be exposed to the English sparrows. The sparrows do not worry. They have no social standing to lose.

"I do not hunt any more," said Mr. Steuart. "As a man grows older he loses his fondness for killing."

That is all that was to be discovered about Mr. Steuart, except as now and then one caught a glimpse of him through the chinks in the story of the census.

In Census Bureau 44 Years.

He began with the bureau 44 years ago as a messenger. He was born in Corpus Christi, Tex., where his father owned a ranch during that long outgrown period during which Sheridan said that if he owned hell and Texas he'd rent Texas and live in hell. The bitter Jeer held good so far as the Steuart family was concerned for the father was murdered—shot in the back. Eventually the Steuarts came back to Baltimore.

"Where did the 'e' come from in the name, anyhow?"

He did not know. There was a story that some of the Scotch Steuarts were exiled to France some centuries ago and there inserted the vowel. Anyhow when he began to grow up he wanted to be a lawyer and in order to procure the needful cases got a job as messenger in the census bureau under Gen. Francis Walker. His first business was to stand over General Walker and blot his signature as he attached it to the letters sent out daily. Nowadays the director of the census could not personally sign all his letters if he did nothing else. The business has grown.

"I remember what a stir that census made," said he. "We stretched a great canvas sign across the front of the building the bureau then occupied. On it was the triumphant slogan: 'Fifty million people.'"

Most of us think of the census bureau as an organization that every tenth year finds out once more where our fathers were born and how old we are and how we spell all our names. Mr. Steuart evidently thinks Andaman Islanders know that much about it. The decennial census in fact masses almost all the facts about us as a people. Not all of them are reduced to statistical form, for the bureau does not get enough money. But if you want to know almost anything enough to warrant putting accountants to work it can be found in the census records.

During the regular census taking, especial attention is paid to population, agricultural, mining and manufacturing statistics. Between times other special inquiries are undertaken.

Wanted Facts About Women.

Not long ago a woman interested in politics said that certain facts about femininity would be of enormous value. But the money was lacking. The task was too great. By the time the information could be gathered it would be out of date.

"Why don't you read the census?" asked Mr. Steuart, mildly. "They are all there."

The American census is, taken as a whole, the most complete massing of facts about a people in the world, although some of the European countries pay more attention to certain phases, especially those having to do with the making of war. But it is not complete as it should be. Our death and birth registrations are notably incomplete, for example. Therefore one part of his job is to urge the various states to get on the job. On Mr. Steuart's desk is a colored map showing the states in purple that have fairly complete death registration. The four others which are behind the times in this matter are picked out in yellow. Two of them are among our most progressive states politically—Nevada and South Dakota.

Birth registration is equally incomplete. Therefore he is working out a scheme for sending birth certificates to mothers. The idea is that when the properly registered baby gets a nice certificate the mother of the unregistered baby next door is apt to ask why her infant has not been distinguished by governmental attention. Eventually her youngster will get on the rolls and win a ticket. Not too many marriages are booked, either. Ministers and others performing marriages are required by law to make a return, but—

"Did you ever prosecute a minister for failure to obey the law?" Mr. Steuart once asked an officeholder.

"Who?" asked the politician. "Me? Prosecute a minister? Say! What sort of a nut do you think I am?"

During the height of the census rush 107,000 people work at it. To do so with success they must know exactly every boundary line—every boundary line of every village, town, city, county, township—in all of the states. And they must be sure of it.

This City's Lines Juggled.

There is a prosperous Western city which coaxed manufacturers to settle there by juggling the city lines. A long skewer of county territory was run right into the heart of the city. In it the manufacturers were placed. There they had all the advantages of city lights and water and fire and police protection, for which they paid farmers' taxes. But when the census was taken that city lacked by a good many thousands the population it thought it had. It made a terrible fuss.

"But there are your lines," said Mr. Steuart. "These people are not in the city."

"Dang it, they ought to be," exploded the mayor.

To make sure of those boundary lines there is a geographers' department in the bureau, in which the slightest change anywhere in the United States is recorded.

An even more interesting slant at the bureau's job is in the statistical department. Machines do the part that pen-and-ink men and women used to do. A stack of perforated cards is run through a machine at the rate of hundreds a minute, a lever is pulled and there are the statistics all nicely columned and totaled. There may be more elaborate adding machines in the world, but none that do just that sort of a job.

"Where did you get them?" I asked.

"We made them," said Mr. Steuart. "Shake hands with the inventor—Eugene La Bioteaux."

Mr. La Bioteaux shook hands, turning to do so from his drawing board.

"He's inventing another machine," said Mr. Steuart. "Getting ready for the next census."

Believes in Publicity.

That is the way the census is handled nowadays. It is perhaps the greatest machine for accountancy in the world. It has been popularized, too. When Steuart took charge all sorts of facts were gathered, but they were published in the 10 or 11 volumes of the decennial census. Now the newspapers get daily releases with all sorts of facts. How many married women work for a living, and how many just play around with the frying pan and the baby. What is the bonded indebtedness of Detroit. How many aliens work in the mines. What the country is worth, anyhow.

Forty-four years of government service. Not quite that, for he quit and began the practice of law after he had become the head of the division of manufacturing statistics in the '80s. The next director of the census asked him to come back. He has been promoted, step after step, until now he is the head of the works.

Just as many—perhaps more—of the bureau chiefs in Washington have won promotion the same way. He scoffs at the idea that the government service is a slackwater in which the unambitious are content to float.

"Promotion on merit is more certain in the government service than in any private corporation," said he. Of course in the commercial world the men who handle the institutions of the complexity of any one of the government bureaus would be paid three or four times the government salary.

"But we stay," said he. "We like it. The work is worth doing."

Biggest Fossil Is to Be Sought in Africa

W. F. Cutler of the University of Manitoba and a fellow of the London Geological society sailed from New York on the Cameronia for London-derry, en route to German East Africa, where, at the invitation of the British government, he will search for what is thought to be the largest fossil in existence.

The fossil, known as the Gigantossurus Africanus, is expected to be found, he said, in a cretaceous bed of the Morrison geological age, which has been slightly investigated by the Germans. It is estimated to be from eight to ten million years of age, 20 feet high and 80 feet in length.

Construction of a miniature railway through the African bush and the service of 100 natives probably will be required to move the specimen, Mr. Cutler said.

Girls Blamed for Fires

Use of electrical beauty machines and cooking devices by girl students of the University of Michigan, at Ann Arbor, caused a number of small fires recently. College officials, having heard the report, are considering preventive measures.

FOR CRIPPLES

Clinic Will be Held in Circleville for Unfortunate Children.

The cut of the little child is James Francis Ater, age 7 years, son of Carey and Margaret Ater of Perry township, Pickaway county. This work was done by Dr. Carruthers, of Cincinnati, orthopedic surgeon.

Before Treatment.

After Treatment.

The Rotary club has arranged to put on their conference on public relations known as Children's day for Crippled Children, to be held at the Home and Hospital, March 27. Dr. Schofield, orthopedic surgeon, Dr. R. G. Leland, chief division of hygiene, county health commissioner, city and county nurses in charge.

There are 39 crippled children in Pickaway county and the families all have been notified. And the Rotary members are to see they are at the hospital, this city, with their parents on the morning of March 27.

DENY ALL CHARGES

Forbes and Thompson to Plead Not Guilty When Arraigned.

Chicago, March 18.—Pleas of not guilty will be entered here tomorrow by Colonel Charles R. Forbes, former director of the veterans' bureau, and J. W. Thompson, Chicago and St. Louis contractor, who are charged with conspiracy and receiving and accepting bribe money. Colonel Forbes is prepared to appear in court and declare his innocence. He said he was glad of the opportunity to appear "in a fair tribunal." He was accompanied by his legal counsel, James Easby Smith of Washington. It was indicated that a continuance would be asked to give the defense time to perfect its case. This move was expected not to be opposed by the government. Colonel Forbes denied all the charges against him.

Willis Proposal Rejected.

Washington, March 18.—The senate defeated overwhelmingly a proposed amendment to the constitution limiting the president to one term of four years. The measure was proposed by Senator Willis of Ohio. The vote was 70 to 4. Senators voting for it were: Willis, Harris, Adams and Underwood.

Vanderlip's Prediction.

Washington, March 18.—Evidence yet to be brought forward in congressional investigations "will shake the nation," Frank A. Vanderlip, New York financier, said in a statement here. Vanderlip said "there are departments other than the department of justice about which there will be shocking revelations." Vanderlip took issue with statements that the country is in a state of hysteria as a result of disclosures by the inquirers, declaring that it is "as yet almost in a state of coma."

Poser for Mother.

The subject of the Sunday school lesson was the golden rule, so during the next week when little Anna was naughty and her mother had to use her stick real hard and put her in a chair to reflect, she asked Anna what she thought about it. Anna replied: "Mother, do unto others as you want them to do unto you. You don't want me to whip you, do you?"

REMODELING BUILDING.

R. Aronson is remodeling his building on East Main street. He is having a new store front put in and is papering and altering the second floor to be occupied as a flat. P. W. Glenn has the contract.

Air Travel.

Some enthusiasts express the opinion that eventually it will be cheaper to travel by air than on the surface. For one thing, no expensive railway tracks are needed, but terminal stations are a prime necessity. However, it will be a long time before railroads and steamships outlive their usefulness. — Pittsburgh Chronicle-Telegraph.

MEG'S ILLNESS HER GOOD LUCK

By JANE GORDON

(© 1924, Western Newspaper Union.)

THE farmer's wife had taken Meg from the orphanage, considering the child the most suitable for her need. Mrs. Wales had a family of growing children, always in need of care, and a farmhouse where duties kept her busy.

Meg was so glad to leave the orphanage that she welcomed tasks, no matter how arduous. She had not long been a resident of the Wales household when she found that much indeed was expected of her, and her living there fairly earned.

One by one the children grew up and away from the girl who had cared for them. Geraldine, the last to remain at home while her sisters were privileged to attend college, was declared by her mother to be capable of taking on Meg's tasks—now that the tasks were so lightened.

And Meg was without a home. She was a bit bewildered at first; the wound of their ingratitude cut deep into her tender heart. But resignedly she endeavored to find the answer to her future. Steady housework left her untrained for business fields.

Mrs. Wales had allowed her servant a small recompense, in addition to the favor of a home. Carefully had Meg laid aside her pittance against a possible need. The need was the present; she bought a ticket for the city and was kissed good-by with good wishes by the woman whom she had served, and by Geraldine, who had grown merely condescending under Meg's self-effacing training.

She found a small sleeping room in the city, and went early to the building where beautiful garments were displayed. Meg was employed, a miracle, it seemed to her; she had appeared at an opportune time. But Meg's place was in a crowded basement where hurrying throngs perplexed and wearied her. She kept on bravely and continued under stress her rule of being faithful and ever kind.

How the accident came about that required a physician's service hurriedly does not matter. Meg had sprained her ankle. In the process of examination, the physician learned that the little girl from the country must again be sent back to the country if she would escape an illness, perhaps at length fatal. The close air of the basement, combined with lack of sufficient nourishment—for she had been obliged to pay more than she really could afford for the city bedroom—had impaired her health dangerously. The doctor advised immediate change and rest in open country.

The physician was giving in his report as Henry Miles of Miles & Turner was making a round of the company's offices before going away. For this same house physician, in agreement with Mr. Miles' personal adviser, had ordered the younger member of the firm to complete change of scene, under threat of pending nervous prostration.

"Girl, small and undernourished," stated the doctor, "will go to pieces physically unless relieved from basement duty. Should be sent to country air." And thereupon was issued Meg's discharge from the firm of Miles & Turner, with the softening compensation of a month's salary.

Meg was trying to solve her problem when Henry Miles came toward her. Financial success had not hardened his heart to the misfortunes of others; though financial success had taken from him his old, beautiful faith in fellow man. Many times had Henry Miles been disappointed in a trusted friendship, which proved under trial to be but self-seeking; also had he mistaken true affection for himself in a woman's love for assured luxury. So he had not married. He asked Meg abruptly:

"You are going away? Where?" She knew him to be an important member of the firm; she was recalling that she had heard that morning of his ill health and was troubled for the man, who in the accumulation of money had lost a greater blessing.

"I do not know where I shall go," she answered. "I hope to obtain work some place where the air may be pure. Perhaps in a summer hotel—I have not had time to think; the news of my weak condition has come suddenly. But—" she brightened under his earnest gaze, "it will be all right. I have a month's salary. I must take the gift; when I am strong again I will come back to work it out."

The hopeful cheer of this small creature in distress moved Henry Miles. The brown eyes upraised to his shone their gratitude. Something comforting crept around the man's world-weary heart; something very like a beautiful faith restored. An impulse seized him. Why not make it possible for this brave little fellow-sufferer to follow his own prescription? Why not send her to the Crystal River resort where he himself hoped to benefit? In a way the firm owed her this. It came to him how these wistful eyes would shine in the glory of hill and rippling water. Later he thought he might be able to procure for her employment at the Crystal River house.

But later—Geraldine Wales came running to her mother; she held a newspaper in her hand. "Read this!" she cried. "How in the world did it happen? Meg is married to the wealthy Mr. Miles!"

All From a Tooth

If you ever go to the Metropolitan museum in New York you will see some specimens of "prehistoric men," men who have lived before we had any history. The question is, how do we know they existed? Nobody has even seen a living man like the ones they have modeled there.

Some of these strange specimens are built up and written about when all we actually have seen or found out about them is one tooth. Imagine building a man and telling his life story from a tooth!

From the tooth, scientists tell what he ate and the size of his jaw and what sort of a head he must have had, and then go on and guess all sorts of interesting things about him until they have built up enough information to model a man who will fit the single tooth they have found.

Ancient Tribe Is Found.

Discovery of a tribe whose people he believes to have antedated the ancient Egyptians, is reported to the National foreign trade council by John Gillen Culbertson, a manufacturer of Wichita Falls, Tex., on his return from a South American tour of a year and a half, says the Detroit News. These people, known as the Machigina, speak a language very similar in construction to English, he reports, and declares they worshiped trees in the tradition that their ancestors had escaped extinction in the Biblical flood by climbing trees. The tribes live in the country of the headwaters of the Amazon, where Mr. Culbertson says he had invaded forests never before penetrated by white men.

First to Illustrate Bible.

No one knows who was the first to illustrate the Bible. Much of this work was done in convents, many of which kept a large number of monks constantly at work making copies of the Bible by hand. It may be that descriptions of angels were handed down by tradition from the shepherds or others professing to have seen these celestial visitors; also, in the description of the angel at the sepulchre it was said, "His raiment was as white as snow." (Matthew, 28:3.) However, on the whole it may be safely said that pictures of angels are fanciful creations in which each artist expresses his own ideas of the beautiful.

"MISSING LINK" IS CALLED MYTH

Professor Says Evolution of Man Was Gradual Process.

How old is man? When, where and how did he originate? That the theory of evolution has now advanced far beyond Darwin's conception was the statement made at the recent Cincinnati meeting of the American Association for the Advancement of Science, by Dr. J. P. McMurich, the retiring president. Doctor McMurich is professor of anatomy in the University of Toronto and on his return home was asked by an interviewer to elucidate in straightforward terms the present state of scientific knowledge respecting this fundamental question of the origin of man.

The theory of evolution did not originate with Darwin, Doctor McMurich pointed out. It was frequently expressed even in classical times. Darwin by his experiments was able to promulgate a plausible explanation of how evolution undoubtedly took place in organic life.

"Missing Link" is a Myth. The "missing link," the stock joke of a generation ago, was a myth, Doctor McMurich declared. Evolution has been a gradual process. There are gaps, it is true, but that proves nothing. It is like looking at a ladder with some of the rungs missing. There is enough of the outline to prove it a ladder nevertheless.

Then Professor McMurich made this striking statement: "There is a big gap between man and the ape, but less than between the ape and the monkey. I mean that the difference is less between man and the highest ape than between the highest ape and the lowest monkey. I am speaking anatomically, of course.

"But I do not believe that any living monkey came into the line of descent of any living ape or that any living ape came into the descent of man. I think that all of them are offshoots.

"The origin of man goes back beyond the origin of any ape now living. "We cannot say where man stops and the ape begins. Evolution being a gradual process extending over hundreds of thousands of years, how can we?"

Difference in Living Races. Certain striking anatomical differences even between the races of present-day man, were pointed out by Professor McMurich. There is a distinct difference in detail of bodily structure between the Australoid race, the Australian aborigine and the Caucasian or white race.

The organs of life of the Australoid woman show a decided variation from those of the white woman. The Australoid, in fact, is still very much of a mystery human. His origin remains one of the interesting problems of the biologist. Much is hoped for from research now being conducted by the University of Sydney.

The South African bushman, a negro type, also differs from the Caucasian, anatomically. And there seems also to be divergences in the case of the Mongolian, the fourth distinct race of mankind.

High Spots in Discoveries. High spots in origin-of-man discovery since Darwin's time include the following:

The Java fossils consisting of skull, teeth and thigh bone found at Trinil, Java, in strata which the geologists say are 500,000 years old. They are the earliest trace so far discovered of man or sub-man.

The Heidelberg skull or jaw bone, said by geologists to be 200,000 or 250,000 years old.

The Piltdown (Sussex, England) skull with near human teeth which the Heidelberg skull lacked altogether—50,000 to 100,000 years old.

Many traces found in Europe of the Neanderthal man—a quite passable human being, 50,000 years ago.

Equally frequent traces in Europe of the Cro-Magnons of 25,000 to 40,000 years ago—the first true man with human hand, human brain, able to draw pictures on the walls of caves in France, where survivals of his race are still said to persist.

"Skulls Make Good Series."

"The ape skull, the Java skull, the Piltdown and Heidelberg skulls, the Neanderthal skull and the skull of present-day man make a pretty good series," said Professor McMurich. "They fit in pretty well. Not continuously, of course. There are great gaps, not in exactly related progression, either. But then there were undoubtedly several lines of descent and some of these skulls have been on collateral instead of direct lines.

"I do not think we have by any means got a direct line of succession, but all discoveries so far have pointed in the same direction. You cannot say that man is descended from the apes, but I think you can say that men and the apes have had an evolution along parallel lines."

Darwin held the theory of one original stock, but scientists now, said Professor McMurich, are gradually coming around to the idea of several divergent lines. Quite possibly in ages gone by there were different types or races of men or sub-men living at the same time.

In fact, it is known that Neanderthals and the Cro-Magnons existed for centuries side by side in Europe until the former disappeared. Just as at the present time the Nordics, the Alpines and the Mediterraneans, three distinct branches of the Caucasian race, live side by side in Europe, and the Caucasians are gradually replacing the Australoids in Australia.

Beginning of Speech an Epoch.

When did man become man? When did he get a mind and those spiritual attributes which we call a soul? The retiring president of the American Association for the Advancement of Science said he does not know. Probably the acquiring of a mind took countless thousands of years. No doubt the mental processes of man underwent an evolution which paralleled his physical development.

The beginning of speech, no doubt, marked an epoch. Then man's mind began to develop.

Where does science place the Garden of Eden? There have been many theories. Professor McMurich recalled having read a geological treatise theorizing that Eden was within the Arctic circle when the area was included in the tropics. Genesis seems to place it near the junction of the Tigris and the Euphrates.

But the scientist has for years placed the location of man's nursery much farther east, in the Siwalik hills of northern India, near Simla, or in the geologically submerged area toward the southeast or in Java where the earliest sub-human fossil, which has been named Pithecanthropus, was found.

Henry Fairfield Osborn, foremost American authority on fossils, thinks Mongolia offers the most fruitful field of research for Eden and at present the American Museum of Natural History has an expedition there seeking clues. Further researches are also being conducted in Java, home of Pithecanthropus. At any moment far reaching discoveries may be made.

But so far Pithecanthropus, half a million years old, holds the record for antiquity.

F. D. Van Valin, Keeper of the Federal Laws

F. D. Van Valin of the State department, keeper of the federal laws, adding the first law or joint resolution of the present congress to all that every American congress has passed before. Mr. Van Valin has the original of 53,001 federal laws (all there are) in his possession. If there is a question as to the accuracy of a law book, the only authority is the actual law as signed by the president of the United States, which are in Mr. Van Valin's care also, and are often referred to by lawyers and judges.

Wife Is Sea Captain; Husband First Mate

Mrs. Jennie E. Crocker of Saugus, Mass., who says she is the only woman licensed captain of an ocean-going sailing vessel in the world, brought her four-masted schooner Ruth Martin into a Perth Amboy drydock recently for repairs.

On board as first mate was the skipper's husband, Nelson A. Crocker. Mrs. Crocker said she also is the only woman with a first mate's license for ocean-going steamships. She passed the examination for the sailing vessel captain's license December 17 last. The schooner piles between Boston and Port St. George, Fla.

Mrs. Crocker is about thirty, slim, with blue eyes and red hair. She was dressed smartly.

Thief Takes Scientific Data Sent to Museum

A scientific collection of data bearing on prehistoric man has been stolen from a box shipped from Europe through the port of New York, Dr. Ales Hrdlicka, anthropologist of the New National museum, Smithsonian Institution, has reported to government officials at Washington.

The scientist last summer collected 125 photographs of fossil bone deposits from central Europe and various souvenirs from England, Germany, France, Australia and Croatia, which he said "would be worthless to any one not versed in anthropology," and shipped them in a box, which, when opened, contained only rocks and gravel.

"Scourge of God?"

The epithet was conferred upon Attila, king of the Huns who, in the Fifth century after Christ, was the terror of Europe. In 452 he invaded Italy and threatened Rome. It was his favorite boast that where his horse had set foot grass never grew again. The expression, "Scourge of God," is first found in the "Legend of St. Loup," composed by a priest of Troyes, in the Eighth or Ninth century. Genserik (406-477), king of the Vandals, and Charles VIII (1483-1498), king of France, received the same title.

Who Was the Black Prince?

The sobriquet was bestowed upon Edward, prince of Wales, and son of Edward III. There is great difference of opinion as to the origin of this appellation. Poissart says that he was styled black "by terror of his arms," while Strutt states that he was named the "Black" for his warlike prowess. The commonly accepted notion is that he was called the "Black Prince" owing to the color of his armor; but Meyrick and Shaw both assert that his armor was anything but black?

Missing Persons Found.

One metropolitan newspaper which conducts a "Missing Persons Department" reports that in 1,260 cases in which aid was requested in finding missing persons, 163 inquiries were successful and that many persons were reunited with their relatives and friends. It is said, however, that this does not represent the total of the missing who are found, as many of the responses are made direct to the inquirer and the cases do not become public.

Punishment Enough.

Just as the guards were leading his client away, the lawyer stopped and shook hands with the recent defendant. "I'm sorry I couldn't do more for you, old man," he apologized. "Don't mention it, sir," replied the prisoner politely. "Ain't five years enough?"—Lorillard's Magazine.

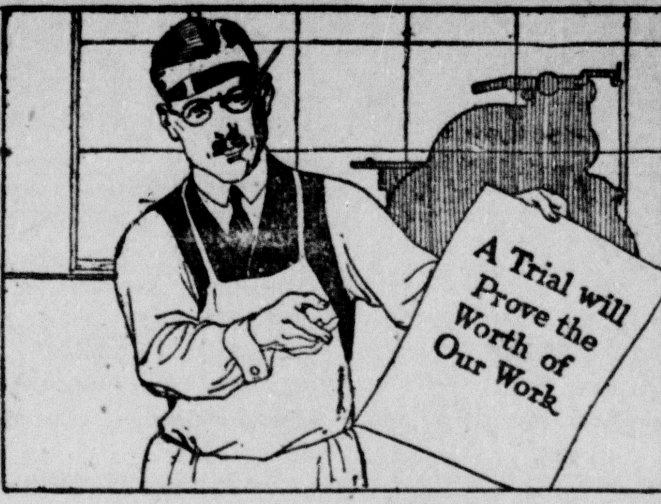

Chance to Attend Worship.

That the troops may have an opportunity of attending public worship, as well as to take some rest after the great fatigue they have gone through, the general in future excuses them from fatigue duty on Sundays, except at the shipyards, or on special occasions until further orders. The general is sorry to be informed that the foolish and wicked practice of profane cursing and swearing, a vice heretofore little known in an American army, is growing into fashion. . . . It is a vice so mean and low, without any temptation, that every man of sense and character detests and despises it.—George Washington.

OCTOGENARIAN

Mrs. Elizabeth Thomas Died at Her Home in Darbyville Tuesday.

Mrs. Elizabeth Thomas, widow of Perry C. Thomas, died at her home in Darbyville this morning at five minutes past nine o'clock of complications.

The deceased was a daughter of David and Anna Couns Dornise, and was born in this county February 11, 1844. She was married to Perry C. Thomas February 13, 1879. He died July 3, 1907.

Mrs. Thomas was a member of the Presbyterian church and the Darbyville W. C. T. U.

Of her immediate family an only brother, Daniel M. Dornise of Darbyville, survives.

Mrs. Thomas was a most estimable woman and will be sadly missed by her large circle of friends both in and around the vicinity of Darbyville where she spent her entire life.

The funeral services will be held at the Darbyville M. E. church Friday afternoon at 2 o'clock standard time. Interment will be in the cemetery nearby.

DESTITUTE FAMILY

Mrs. Thomas Harris Died of Diphtheria, Leaving Five Children.

The family of Thomas Harris, of West Holland, is sorely afflicted. Mrs. Lulu Harris died of diphtheria Monday morning leaving five motherless children. The eldest is a girl eight years old and the youngest also a girl fifteen days. The father, a butcher, is utterly unable to provide for his family of children and they will be brought to this city and placed in a detention home, where Mrs. William Chrissinger will be placed in charge until further order of the juvenile court, or until the father has some means of caring for his little ones. It is the worst case of destitution with which Probation Officer Mrs. C. A. Patton has had since she has been on duty.

LEGION AUXILIARY TO HAVE BUSY YEAR

Mrs. Helen A. Bishop, national president of the American Legion Auxiliary, grew interested in the work of the service organization through her war service to men in the training camps. Following a long period of work at Camp Devens and other Eastern training centers the auxiliary leader saw that there was a definite need for some organization to carry on the work left off by other service agencies at the signing of the armistice.

Carrying her problems to American Legion officials in Massachusetts, she was apprised of the organization of the American Legion Auxiliary, and set out immediately to form units in a section of Massachusetts near her own home. Soon this work became statewide, and she was selected as organizer for the whole state. This work opened a long and useful service to the auxiliary which was rewarded at San Francisco by her selection as national president.

Auxiliary work is well under way this year and 1924 gives promise of being the greatest that the women aids of the Legion have yet experienced. The organization has grown numerically each year, and Mrs. Bishop hopes to increase the membership to 300,000 during her term of office.

In making committee appointments for the year, Mrs. Bishop chose women to head the work well qualified for the positions.

Dr. Kate Waller Barrett, president of the American Legion Auxiliary during 1923, has been named chairman of the foreign affairs committee. In announcing the appointment of Doctor Barrett to this position, Mrs. Bishop took cognizance of the former leader's experience in foreign affairs, and an international reputation as a worker for women's welfare.

Doctor Barrett was one of four American women accorded the honor of witnessing the signing of the Versailles peace treaty. In 1919, she was the American member of the International Conference of Women in Geneva, called to bring about disarmament. She has, on several occasions, represented the United States government on foreign missions, twice going to the Near East at the instance of the bureau of immigration.

Dr. Helen Hughes Hiescher of Mankato, Minn., has been appointed to head the rehabilitation work of the auxiliary during the ensuing year. Doctor Hiescher was one of the "first presidents" of the organization, organizing the auxiliary in Minnesota. She has always played a prominent part in auxiliary affairs. Doctor Hiescher is a practicing physician and during her husband's absence with the colors, took over his work in Mankato. Following a visit to hospitals for service men in Minnesota in 1920, she closed her offices and has since devoted her time and efforts to care of disabled soldiers. Because of her activity, a revolving fund called the "Helen Hughes Hiescher fund," has been established by the auxiliary in Minnesota, from which service men may borrow without payment of interest.

Mrs. Lowell F. Hobart, another past national president of the organization has been named by Mrs. Bishop to head the committee on co-operation with other organizations. Mrs. Hobart was president of the auxiliary in 1922.

Other appointments as committee chairman announced by Mrs. Bishop are those of Mrs. Walter Beals, Seattle, chairman of the legislative committee; Mrs. W. H. Morgan, Edwarsville, Ill., chairman of the child welfare committee; Mrs. B. W. Black, Salt Lake City, chairman of the hereditary committee, and Mrs. John Marshall, Anchorage, Kentucky, as chairman of the finance committee, a re-appointment.

Post Will Aid City

A certain fund set aside by officials in Patchogue, L. I., for erection of a memorial to World war soldiers, will be devoted to construction of a new firehouse for the community. This was made possible by action of the American Legion members in that place who have a nucleus of $5,000 which they expected to spend on a post home, in connection with the fund already appropriated by town officials. Citizens will also be asked to subscribe so that the new edifice will represent an expenditure of approximately $18,000.

PLATTSBURG CAMP.

Mr. and Mrs. E. F. Anderson motored to Columbus this morning where Mrs. Anderson will attend the Republican Plattsburg to be held at the Deshler hotel for three days. Mrs. Anderson will be in the division of public speaking during the camp, which will be along intensive lines of training for the coming campaign.

CONFIDENCE

The most beautiful of all human relationships are based on CONFIDENCE. Love is based on confidence, friendship is based on confidence, happy marriages are based on confidence; and so, confidence is the highest aim a business institution can achieve, because it introduces into the processes of buying and selling, something of the unselfish quality of those sacred human relationships that are untouched and uncontaminated by money. This store never wants to be guilty of such bad taste as to claim perfection, but it makes no secret of its ambition to foster and deserve at all times the confidence of its customers.

There is no higher success than
TO BE BELIEVED IN!
